The journey of college is, for me, a series of downs and ups, hitting and missing the mark, and building legacies. I had my share of F's and A's. I lost touch with old friends but gained new ones. I developed new skills, broke bad habits. But most importantly, I learned to value the beautiful things I experience and make. Legacies come in all shapes and sizes, and I fancy to think the Ateneo is a crucial part in helping me build my own and leave some behind. Thank you, Big Blue.

“Ora et Labora.” I never would’ve thought it would take quite a number of all-nighters and barely-met deadlines, frequent migraine attacks, mountains of desserts, and miraculous recoveries from moments of defeat, to finally, committedly apply a Benedictine motto I first learned when I was six. I owe so much of my personal growth to Ateneo. I’ve always had ambition, but the disparity is that my goals now are far greater than myself. So thank you, Ateneo. You’ve made every smile and tear worth it.
