The best lessons I've learned in the Ateneo are found deeper than in the intellectual realm. My last few years here have taught me the most valuable lesson I wish I had known sooner – a lesson about passion. Passion is the relentless drive, the voluntary push. It kept me going when requirements hit me hard, and I found myself doing more than I thought I was capable of. Ateneo taught me this lesson and many more. For this, I will always stand proudly by my university.

I came from a green school then went to the blue one. You know what I like to call myself? Atelite. Either way, the journey has been great despite it being a roller coaster ride, courtesy of the people I've met along the way.
