My voyage in Ateneo has been a fruitful one. I gained new friends – the mast of a ship – who have stayed with me through thick and thin. I also had remarkable professors – the lighthouses – who guided me in my classes and taught me life lessons. In the multitude of experiences I had, I learned to never give up, and to strive hard to keep on going, even if there are strong waves that come my way, or big boulders that block my path.

Ateneo gave me the space and opportunity to succeed, and more importantly, to fail and fall apart. Beyond just the lessons in the classroom, it gave me the chance to get to know myself better and realize how little I already knew, how little I know even now, and probably ever will. I'll always be grateful for the four years worth of learning, breaking, and growing it gave me, until I turned into someone I never thought I could be but so immensely happy to have become.
