Ateneo has taught me that stress is inevitable, that coffee and tea are lifesavers (but sleep is better), and that I am an efficient crammer. I also crammed this writeup. But it's okay, because I've learned that I don't need to rush my goals in life. These four years have helped me to embrace the now, myself, and my passions. But more importantly, nothing else matters if you can't enjoy life – and a good slab of steak.

A.K.A Raffy/ Senyor/ Sausage/ Candyman/ Husky. Living life by bringing happiness to those I meet along the way. I've always felt that one of the best ways to find happiness is in helping others find their own happiness. Seeing others smile will always be a magical experience for me. To the countless amazing people I've met in college, I can't thank you enough for you are the reason why I am positive that life is worth living. Be true to who you are. Never give up. Never forget to live and love.
