

MINOR IN PHILOSOPHY

Jayne Eunice T. Arriola

I set out on this voyage hoping to learn from as many experiences as possible. I've explored organizations, conquered waves of requirements, and braved through storms of stress. Ateneo brought me to high seas but never to still waters. It continuously pushed me to go outside of my comfort zone and myself. In this voyage, I learned that it's not always in the sight of the sea nor the sound of the waves, but in the heart and wonder of the adventurer where the sea discovers its beauty.

Lestle Marie D. Cagumbay

Leaving the province for the metro was a decision I firmly made four years ago. I never thought it would have been as difficult as I initially thought. The struggle to keep up with the world was real. I failed, succeeded, cried, and laughed. So much had happened; but now, this life I have chosen to sail that was full of rainbows and storms is about to end. Because of all the experiences and people who have been with me, I became a stronger and more independent woman - ready to go down the hill.