

MINOR IN LITERATURE (ENGLISH)

Javier Leon Fernando C. Alcantara

Avie doesn't simply believe in carpe diem, he believes in tomorrow. In poise, chinos, flannel, and solid-color shirts. In carrying oneself well. In the nuggets of truth in Tolkien and Rowling. In Miyazaki creating another film. In the spiciest of noodles. In biceps. In the voice of the theater. In the struggle. In having to leave. In returning. In being a good friend. In being a true dragon. In sleep. In doing what it takes. In the possible. In hoping for the light to come.

To the woman who brings out the dreamer, the fighter, and the lover in the lives that she touches: I wish for you nothing less than lightness, and for you to continue to reflect the light you give off.
