

DOUBLE MAJOR IN BS APPLIED MATHEMATICS; MAJOR IN MATHEMATICAL FINANCE

Reina Krizel J. Adriano

It gets tiring explaining to people why I took a double major in Applied Mathematics and Creative Writing. It was a wild ride, though. Even if I may not have entirely bridged the two disciplines together, I'm glad I've learned how to look at the different permutations of life. And now as my stay at the university finally comes to an end, all I can say is this: graduation is sweeter the second time around.

Contents of my Atenean doggy bag: Brett's pesto pasta. The first time Ate Alma called me "pangga." Hallaback. Re-taking NSTP until I finally succeeded in fourth year. Gonzaga's stuffed breadsticks. My Starbucks family. The cats. M01. Live-tweeting Theology classes with Ray Aguas. Surviving orals with minimal meltdowns. Belle Mapa. Never quitting, even when I wanted to. Realizing that every victory, no matter how small, is something to be proud of.
