It's tempting to summarize the past four years with grand, positive words and show these off like shiny medals, as if the journey was bump-free. This is the ideal: a flawless voyage. It's natural to expect a "Eureka!" moment in every class—yet there will be times when lessons aren't learned, party nights lost in favor of textbooks, and caffeine serves as your sole company. But it's okay to be at a loss and cry, to make mistakes and stumble. Just stand up, dust off the dirt, and keep on walking.
