I found myself sitting by the rocky Italian coast looking towards the magnificently warm sunset. As it slowly melted into the orange-tinted sea, I recounted the pains, the tests and the challenges it took to experience this moment. All the pains we experience today bear fruit to the happiness of tomorrow - to fight and to work hard for what you believe in is to prove the viability of your existence - that you are here breathing, dreaming, and living in the multitude of everything.

“The aim of life is to live, and to live means to be aware, joyously, drunkenly, serenely, divinely aware.” (Henry Miller)
