

MINOR IN JAPANESE STUDIES

Arielle M. Pizarro

As my good friend Holden once said, “Don’t ever tell anybody anything. If you do, you start missing everybody.”

Maria Clarriza Quiambao

What they say about us is true: we do treat our academics as if they were our top priority. What they think about us is untrue: our academics are not our only priority. These past four years have been a learning experience. I learned to push my limits, and I am now comfortable stepping out of my comfort zone. I learned that I could do everything, but only if I continue to improve myself. I learned to lend a hand, and to accept a helping hand. At the Ateneo, I learned to love learning.
