

MINOR IN CHINESE STUDIES

Irish S. Tolentino

Live life always with a heart filled with passion and hunger. This is what I learned from every nerve-racking pursuit for an A and every thrill and frustration behind executing every project. I thank you, Ateneo, for the countless opportunities to struggle, to serve, and to grow, and the lifelong friends I have come to cherish. The past four years have been nothing short of extraordinary surprises. For that, I am always beyond grateful.

For all the times I've watched the sun rise as I cram algorithms and heuristics into my unwilling brain, for the times I've received grades lower than the deepest pits of hell, and for all the times I've cried uncontrollably over spilled milk. Thank you, Ateneo, because for every hard fall I took and every bad day I encountered, you taught me to be resilient and bounce back even harder. For holding me steady these past four years, I am forever grateful to the Ateneo.
