College was a trial by fire for me. It drove me out of my comfort zone, and gave me many difficulties that were extremely challenging. But through those, I learned not to place any limits on myself. By breaking the pattern of creating self-imposed limits on myself, I was able to escape the boundaries of fear and self-doubt in my life, and achieve the type of self-growth that I desired for myself.

Parents, you supported me all the way. I am aware it wasn't easy for you to sacrifice your resources to help me graduate in ADMU. Expect an ROI. You will always be my heroes. You did it all by yourselves. Thank you! Friends, it's been a pleasure to enjoy this ride with your company. It's been crazy and wild, and I loved it. To the love of my life, college was great, but it would have been so much better with you in it. If you're reading this, my heart is yours from the very start. I love you.
