

Christine Gayle G. Carabeo

To my org mates whom I share similar interests with, my professors who have generously shared their knowledge, my JTA friends who made Korea feel like home, my block mates who have stayed with me through the years, my family who has endlessly supported me, and to every individual I've crossed paths with throughout my stay, thank you for being the catalysts for my growth. Thank you, Ateneo, for allowing me to discover people who serve as my lighthouse in trials and my anchor in triumphs.

MINOR IN JAPANESE STUDIES

Francisco Lorenzo M. Castro III

This is to my future self: You made it, my dude. You may have hated the rush of running to and from Bel in 10 minutes flat, the sleepless nights studying, the long tests, and whatever else, but you did it. I know you get sentimental when things end, but think of it this way: You've made long-lasting friendships, had new experiences, learned and grown here. You made it all the way through, now it's time to get out there. Besides, no one said you couldn't come back to visit, right?