

Emilio R. Acosta

I began my journey starry-eyed and naive, in pursuit of a diploma to build my career. Armed with perseverance and determination, I weathered through numerous setbacks, strenuous classes, consuming football practices and games, and endless requirements. As I disembark, I realize that there is more to life than chasing a degree; our planet is a vast place to explore.

To those who guided and supported me, thank you. I am now ready to walk down the hill and begin my adventure.

I've been staring at this text box for days now. I genuinely can't find the words to wrap up my four years in Ateneo. I guess it's impossible to do in less than five hundred characters. With this, I'll just end with a quote that inspires me to be better. Fitting that it's from a television series, one of the things that helped me get through the stresses of college life.

"Have some fire. Be unstoppable. Be a force of nature." (Cristina Yang, Grey's Anatomy)
