

MINOR IN FINANCE

Janica Rose D. Mendoza

“...throw roses into the abyss and say: ‘here is my thanks to the monster who didn’t succeed in swallowing me alive.’ “ (F. Nietzsche)

San Sharmaine C. Mendoza

At first glance, you might say that she’s the most masungit little girl you’ll ever meet. Once you get to know her, you’ll surely rethink. The little girl travels — a lot. She can take care of herself. She’s been to many places, and she’s bound to go to more. She has big plans, and small ones, too. She’s done so much already, but you know she can do even more. It may not look like it, but she’ll surprise you, this little girl no more. She’s a little coconut, and you could not ask for more.
