I am clueless about how to make a write-up at this point, stuck in between the last two semesters of my college life. But I can definitely say that Ateneo is where I was able to push myself beyond my limits and where I met the best people in my life. I know that different threads of memories in Ateneo will last so much easier than I expect them to, and they will hopefully all make sense in the end.

Embarking on this college journey away from home and virtually on my own was quite an enormous challenge. Meaningful friends and family made the inevitable rough seas along the way bearable. Determination aided by prayers and encouragement fueled the drive towards the dock when its lights seemed to flicker. The rough seas notwithstanding, enjoyment and gratification likewise permeated the journey. It was indeed a remarkable one.
