There's a hero inside every one of us, each filled with their own sense of justice and battles we learn to fight. We are by no means super--only human with more weaknesses than strengths. However, true strength lies not in being able to save everyone, but in learning to save ourselves. Before we can become a hero for others, we must become the hero we ourselves need. It is only when we learn to stand tall amidst our flaws that we can become something truly amazing.
