

Ivan Benedict B. Chan

When life gives you lemons, squeeze them with dignity. Academics and I never got along, but I believe that college isn't about that. It's about personal growth and building connections. I entered college broken and depressed, but God used college to mold me by blessing me with my life anchors: my family, my best friend (Jude), and my barkada (E.M.I.L.). I've lost a lot, but learned a lot. Here I am, finally breaking away from the chains of academics, stronger and more driven than ever before.

Enrique L. Chavez

It's the people who were with me when I couldn't finish that EN 11 paper, the ones that cheered me up on my failed Psych exam, or the ones that just sat and listened when I had no one else to talk to, whom I'll remember the most. They lent me their smiles when I couldn't find mine. I wouldn't have made it this far if it weren't for them. And I think that's really what college life is all about.