In college, I almost never knew what to do, drank too much coffee, and barely slept. Yet I've never felt more human. Sometimes it's better to not have a plan or not to have everything figured out. I've learned to break away from routines and began to face every day not knowing what's about to happen. I know what I want, but I won't limit myself. My failures define me; but only because of how I've worked through them. Work hard; laugh and love harder. Fear nothing but dullness.

To study in Ateneo was never my first choice, but looking back, it was a decision I'm glad I took. Words are not enough to describe these past four years and nothing can compare to the memories that I will forever cherish. Thank you Ateneo for the professors that guided me from day one, the friends I gained and lost, the sleepless nights and exhausting days I endured, the parties that I enjoyed and the valuable knowledge that I will never forget. Thank you Ateneo for making me what I am today.
