

MINOR IN DEVELOPMENT MANAGEMENT

Alexandra Danielle O. Dolendo

Some people call me forgetful. I forget people's names. I may even forget every lesson, quiz, project, or oral exam I had in Ateneo.

However, I know I will remember the friends I lost and gained, the moments I could do nothing but cry, my comebacks from failures, and my moments of victory and relief; but most importantly, I will remember to hope – in myself, my family and friends, and God – that I will make it through the storm, and as Mattie Stepanek said, I remember to dance in the rain.

Every challenge and every victory was a stroke of a brush. At times you may want to forget everything and start over, but you learn to trust the process. You learn to trust yourself. You learn to trust the wonderful people around you. For every time life makes you cry, it will make you laugh five more. Wipe your tears off and don't worry. Smile. You'll find that life is beautiful, and so are you.
