After all the sleepless school nights, nerve-racking presentations, engaging org projects, and spontaneous block lunches, the four-year journey has come to an end. I entered college unaware of what lay ahead of me. I leave with fond memories, life-changing realizations, and a full heart. Thank you to my teachers, classmates, orgmates, friends, and family for making these years worth it. Thank you, Ateneo, for giving me this opportunity to grow and develop into who I am today.

In college, there are people who come into your life, cause a ripple, and then leave just as fast as they came. However, there are those who serve as your anchor, believing in you until the very end. Claire is exactly that and more. She's my anchor and my best friend. With her warm and bubbly personality, she can light up the room in a snap, never failing to bring a smile to the saddest face. Believe me when I say that this stationery-obsessed future doctor is going to reach great heights.
