

Catherine Faith C. Yang

“Next to trying and winning, the best is trying and failing.” (Anne of Green Gables)

Ateneo taught me that it isn't the winning that counts but it's what you learn from it and what you do with it. I was timid and shy when I started in Ateneo but I leave bolder and braver. Thank you Ateneo for the opportunities and pushing me to become more. Here's to an uncertain future filled with unimaginable adventures and mishaps. Ad Majorem Dei Gloriam.

Jasmine Patricia T. Yiu

Now, as a senior in the school I hold so dear, I have soared through greater heights - having experienced many projects in the organizations I have been in, bonded with new friends in college, and lastly, truly understood the meaning of being an Atenean, being a student- meant for others. As I go through this new journey of being part of the workforce, I will constantly remember the values I have learned in this university. Now's the time not to reflect on my past, but instead move forward.