Axel Toni Steven C. Ngui

Much of what people know about Axel revolves around what he's done in the UAAP pool for the past five years, but there was always so much more to him than that. He's usually busy with school but always knew how to have fun, especially with his friends. Despite his imposing figure and whatever circumstances, he was friendly to everyone and didn't want anybody to feel left out. What made him a natural leader is that he was always ahead of the pack but it never felt like he was leaving you behind.

Clarisse Anne D. Nuqui

In Ateneo, I learned that not everything is black or white. We thrive on gray areas, clawing through the twilight and dawn. But in all these uncertainties is a challenge to see hope and innovate, to see colors and perpetuate them. Thank you, Ateneo for letting me find my source of colors. To all the people who have made these four years the best ones yet, I will be forever be grateful to all of you. All these moments, both bleak and bright, will serve as my beacon to choose what's right, always.
