

Francine Luigi C. Tan

Keep the dream alive. No matter what obstacles you may face. I entered the Ateneo thinking that I was going to become a doctor. Lo and behold, here I am, following my passion and graduating from a different course that I absolutely love. I was afraid at first, you know. The journey could have been a lonely one. But I made it through with the guidance of ever understanding faculty and beyond caring friends.

Those four years went by in a blur. From the first day of classes to my last oral examination, I have soared and flown through the toughest terrain I have ever faced, but I would not have it any other way. I have the Ateneo to thank for all that I have become, and for all that I will be. And as I go down from the hill, I will do everything for the greater glory of God.
