“There is always something left to love.”
(Gabrie Márquez)

With every moment of bravery there is fear, with every triumph there is failure, with every happiness there is sadness—we would not be where we are without the presence of pain and the uncertain. Allow the world to mark you with sorrow, anger, and doubt. Embrace that which scares you and allow it to push you to become a better version of yourself because there is much to be done, much to be said, and much more in store for us.
