

MINOR IN PROJECT MANAGEMENT

Marie Julieanne C. Villa

She might be small, but never underestimate her – Liane loves to try a lot of things, including music, design, and information technology. Ateneo has helped her realize that she can only recognize her real potential if she tries, because nothing will happen if she doesn't. She may have had some missed opportunities along the way, but what really matters are the experiences she had, the shots that she took, and the real people that stayed with her through thick and thin.

MINOR IN INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS

Cholo Frances P. Villanueva

We don't always get what we want when we want it; sometimes, even our best is not enough to help us succeed. We fall short, too, and that's okay. That doesn't mean we should stop trying. If there's one thing I learned in the Ateneo, it's what OBF really stands for. More than the wins and the losses, it's about appreciating the efforts made and the smaller victories that come with them. Going down the hill, I will continue fighting the One Big Fight – always, and in all ways.
