

Adrienne Denise C. Aguirre

Denise is as real as they come, and she isn't afraid to say what's on her mind. But, don't be fooled by her tough exterior. Beneath that death stare is one of the kindest souls you could ever encounter. Those on her good side know how great of a friend she is. They know that she'll stick with you even through defenses, papers, and countless all-nighters. And if you can get through all of that without wanting to kill each other, you know you've found a friend for life.

Ira Mae R. Alarcon

In four years, I learned that I have so much, and yet I still gained so much. I gained friendships worth treasuring and memories worth remembering. Even though I started the journey like a mermaid learning how to walk for the first time, those four years taught me how to mob instead. I went from honors to horrors, from schoolbags to eye bags. Through mobbing, I discovered and conquered so many fears and doubts I never would have done on my own. This gives me something to be thankful for everyday.