I believe that more than the destination, it is the journey that makes one's life worth living. It's the experiences, the memories made, and the time spent with those around me that I consider more valuable than anything else. I am thankful that I was given the opportunity to share and be part of the lives of those who have made my past four years meaningful since it is because of them and their undying support that I have grown to be the person I am today.

"If you don't fully take every moment, and love every moment, and every person that you're with, your life will be over before you realise." (Jessica Chastain)
