If there's one thing that my stay in Ateneo has taught me, it would be that hard work is what keeps the ship moving. With hard work, our strengths are built up to be greater than what we're naturally born with. With hard work, I can conquer unassailable obstacles better than what I deemed myself capable of. Ultimately, Ateneo has taught me that hard work, when done for others, is far more high-yielding. This is the lesson I take to heart as this ship docks and I set out to sail on another.

My heart is full of gratitude to the Ateneo. It is home to the best and worst memories I've come to experience. It is where I met the greatest and most supportive people I've ever met and where I learned to be a stronger and better version of myself. The failed long tests, crammed reports and nerve-wrecking oral exams have been worth it. Thank you for the past four years, Ateneo. I will forever be grateful for your white and blue.
