

MINOR IN DECISION SCIENCE

Neville Austen D. Que

Upon entering the gates of Ateneo, I hoped that everything would go smoothly for me, but as each year went by, I came across countless challenges and overwhelming pressure. However, each adversity I faced also brought humbling experiences, allowing me to take to heart the values of discipline, courage, and tenacity to push forward. I can give nothing but gratitude for this colorful journey as I prepare for what lies ahead of me.

MINOR IN ECONOMICS

Dianne Joy P. Quintela

The last four years were spent traversing my own yellow brick road, and despite the wild beasts (brain-draining exams), the witches (terror professors), and the deadly poppies (endless all-nighters), my journey still led me to and prepared me for my Emerald City – the Real World! Thank you, Ateneo, for the most exhausting yet enriching journey of my life; I won't be who I am now without the adventures you've let me experience.