

Jimmy S. Soriano

It's been said that who we are in the end is who we always were in the beginning, only more so. The process of becoming is always a painful one, filled with little hurts and disappointments, like a slab being broken into a sculpture. We are broken into something more than we were.

It is this journey for more that has kept Jimmy going, along with the friends he has made and the home he has found. For that and everything else, he is infinitely grateful.

"To see the world, things dangerous to come to, to see behind walls, draw closer, to find each other, and to feel. That's the purpose of life." (Secret Life of Walter Mitty)

Years from now, you'll reminisce the past. When you were still in college. Regret, delight, and, perhaps, everything in the spectrum of emotions, you will feel. But most importantly, you'll be thankful. Because you learned to live, to love, to survive, to fight, and to be alive.

Then you'll grin and say, "Nice. Nice. Nice."
