

Kristine Celine C. Kwok

Life has taught me that things are not constant. Friends come and go, but so do problems. That is the reality that I have faced. But, this journey in Ateneo also showed me that even when distance sets us apart, there are still some constants in my life. True, some people from my anchor have rusted away through time. However, my anchor has also strengthened with a fresh coat of friends. As for now, I need to learn the ability to let go and remove this anchor to embark onto a new journey.

Raynante P. Lagasca, Jr.

Hey, if you're reading this and you expected a touching and/or inspiring message, you're not gonna get it. Go find your own dramatic life-changing insight.