“And I realized that there’s a big difference between deciding to leave and knowing where to go.” (Robyn Shneider)

MINOR IN DECISION SCIENCE

Ralph Joseph R. Kang

If you want something, you take it.

These are the words this man lives by. Ralph is a dreamer who strives to achieve the impossible. He is always on his 200%, and yet manages to keep a calm and cool demeanor. He left his roots in search for independence, knowledge, and new experiences, taking opportunities given to him and making something out of them. In his four years in the Ateneo, he found friends he could call family and a place he could call home in this mad city.
