

Gabriel Angelo A. Besa

Jean-Paul Sartre once said that man was condemned to be free. We did not ask for freedom but we are. And I? I have entered college with many dreams: a class clown, the Sanggu president, and the like – and Ateneo has been generous with opportunities. But every choice I have made – being an Armorer, a CODER, a mountaineer, a SecMob – has closed others for me. Do I regret such? Of course not, I have become the sum of my actions. I have grown conviction, wisdom and the heart. I ask for no appeal.

Antonio M. Bicos, Jr.

“Paradise has its hunter/ Call me blind, call me fool/ I don’t mind chasing thunder” (Dear Believer, Edward Sharpe and the Magnetic Zeros)