Four years ago, I left my ACET essay blank by accident. I never thought I'd be here today, yet here I am, writing a story I never thought I'd live. I never thought I'd grow to love and fill it with moments of friendship, pain, and inspiration. As I prepare to leave, I find myself holding on to these memories as I hope to find more places and moments such as these.

The road leading to this was not, in any way, how I expected it to be. The hopes and aspirations I developed through my journey in the university prove that I will never be in total control of the things that happen in life, but I have been prepared by the best to face it head on. Thank you for my happiest years, Ateneo.
