It took time for me to recognize that I was infinitesimal, a speck of cargo in this ship called life, swimming in this ocean known as the universe. But it comes with piercing clarity how even though I'm so small against the vastness of this infinity, still there is an entire universe with me as its expanse. I learned that - how we can dream and we can be happy, because we're made of a million twinkling lights.

I'm a universe.

And I'm worthy of making the most out of this stardust existence.

The greatest moment of your life is now. Be thankful for the past, but don't dwell on it. It's there to appreciate and to learn from. Have goals for the future but don't set them in stone. Leave plenty of room for things you can't imagine. Make a few friends and keep them close. Work on yourself and follow your own way. Know your strengths and play to them. Make sure they outweigh your weaknesses.
