

MINOR IN FRENCH

Chrissa Jem A. Tan

Four years forward and I am still quite certain one would continue to recognize that awkward product of an all-girl catholic school. Aside from the deceptive young look that would shock anyone upon knowing that she is about to finish college, this girl has nothing to prove about who she is and who she isn't. Jem--that pretty, gentle, and one of a kind girl--turned out to be one fine woman. Far from perfect, but surely like me, her friends would know how life can't be complete without her in it.

Here's to all the F's, late night trainings, the missed deadlines and mediocre papers, to the successful events, occasional A's, and aced defenses. It was no cakewalk, but thank you for making me stronger. Here's to my friends, roommates, orgmates, core teams and co-heads, and my ever-supportive family. Thank you for believing in me even when I didn't believe in myself. Here's to the Ateneo. It was a pleasure. Thank you for helping me get as close to being Beyonce as I'll ever be.
