“Ridiculous! Apply yourself!” (Walter White)

Gabrielle Ruth P. Briones

Sometimes the message comes not in words but in actions (Alejandro, 2016). Ruth is the type of person who reads; everything from a handed note, to a given book, to a technical manual, and to facial expressions, from the arrangement of a room to the way commuters might perceive situations differently from drivers and observers, pedestrians and barters. Trying to read between the lines in a world of sounds, she believes that behind the noise is something left said, but lost in translation.
