My parents actually thought that Ateneo would turn me into someone indifferent, self-centered, or at worst, a conyo whose only goal was to get a bachelor's degree from a renowned school.

Through the years, they have witnessed how the conyo has grown to be someone so aware, and even passionate about the prevailing issues of today's society.

This conyo is proud to be an Atenean.

Nothing but love for the four years full of experiencing heaven and hell on earth, for the friends who became family, and for the unwavering support of milk tea and white cheddar popcorn that got me through everything.
