My first steps in this journey were uncertain—of who I was, what I wanted, or where I was going. But the value of each step that followed was increased by support from family, laughter with friends, and epiphanies about myself. While I am saddened that my Ateneo journey is now but a sojourn, I anticipate the things ahead. Everything is beautiful in its time after all. And as I take these last steps, I realise that above all, my time here was made beautiful not because of who I am but Whose I am.
