

MINOR IN ENTERPRISE DEVELOPMENT

Sandra Grace O. Dueñas

Beyond being the keen and resourceful go-to girl for information and tips to get by, there is one thing Sands makes sure of—that she paints smiles on her friends' faces in any way possible. Somehow, even if she has no intention of doing so, she brings out the joy in the hearts of the ones she loves. She wants everyone she meets to remember her as someone who has, at least at one point, given them a reason to smile, for she believes that inside people's memories, she can live forever.

MINOR IN JAPANESE STUDIES

Girard Michael Blair A. Dy Pico

The journey hasn't been simple or straightforward in any way, but I have no regrets about the people I've met and lost, the professors I've had, and projects I've joined. I may not have been where I wanted to be in freshman year, but now I can confidently go down the proverbial hill knowing I've made the most of my time in Ateneo. And to my future self—if you feel lost, don't fret. It's part of the process. Keep going. Carpe diem—seize the day.
