

MINOR IN DEVELOPMENT MANAGEMENT

Anne Janelle R. Sy

The closer one gets to the end, the brighter beginnings always seem. Struggles have become learning experiences, and heartaches have become growing pains. The past four years have formed something of a story—one with its high and lows, its twists and turns, and its thrilling and nerve-racking surprises. As I close this final chapter, I find myself even more grateful for all the others that came before.

This is the ending this story deserves.

MINOR IN SPANISH

Andi Faisal Noor R. Tabusalla

What will come next is uncertain.
Everything passes in time.
Endings make way for beginnings,
deepening spirits and minds.