

Patricia Celina A. Ngo

Adventures are all about perspective. I may not have fought real dragons, but I was able to conquer operations research and oral exams. I haven't explored the world, but I've traveled around Katipunan (and Singapore!) to eat. I didn't have travel plans, and I also didn't plan how any of this turned out — the late nights with my scientific calculator, the long breaks at JSEC, or the study sessions with friends who also hadn't started studying yet — but I wouldn't go through college any other way.

MINOR IN CHINESE STUDIES

Raenelle Ean A. Ngo

Raenelle is a firm believer in getting things done, and getting things done well. This principle has guided her through four years that have been turbulent at times, and she hopes that it will continue to do so as she enters the world beyond. She also hopes to wake up earlier in the morning, but that seems less likely. (Hello, 8AM classes.) (D. Cheng)