Greetings Traveler. That was an adventure that was very fun, yet boring, fast, but long, and many other a descriptive that will be countered by its opposite. Before going on this arduous expedition, I was a fresh high school graduate who believed that things would be less taxing than high school. I was right, but in line with my description of this adventure, I was also wrong. It was a campaign that has changed my perception of the world through the many experiences I have taken a part in.

After five years in a place that I have grown to love, it won't be easy going down from the hill. I am not yet sure where I'll go from here, but whatever the future holds, I will always remember all of the lessons Ateneo taught me. After graduation day, it is now time to venture outside the walls of the classroom and onto the real world. It's scary and exciting, but if there's only one thing I can take away from my stay here in Ateneo, it is to always persist. Continue to grow and carry on.
