

Bianca Marie S. Hilario

Bea has this way about her. The first time you'd lay eyes on her porcelain face, you'd think she's a freshman, an angel of innocence, the epitome of the Filipina dalaga – but let me assure you, she is full of surprises. It only makes her more spell-binding, though. And don't fret about being cast under her spell – she takes care of her friends, and when she trusts you, let me tell you that that is one of the highest honors you will receive in your lifetime (K. Andaya)

Ayesha Moira J. Igasan

My philosophy professor once told us, "Perhaps anxiety is just hope getting a little ahead of itself." For me, it seems that hope fell short and anxiety took over. But what's wrong with a little anxiety? Mix it with a couple cups of coffee and my Spotify fix... I think I'm good.