

Jose Claudio Ricardo Sebastian R. Lopa

A small part of me recognizes the effort that has to be put in to being a good person.

Claudio Lopa is just a name I constantly try to give meaning to.

I only recently came to the realization that there are many possible realities. Death scares me, but I think transcendence may be real.

We started this voyage in freshman year and now we are docking to our final stop. I have never realized how short four years could be. I entered college unsure of what I wanted to become. But as I leave this university, I have never been more sure of what I want to do. To the professors who have taught me and the friends who have encouraged me, know that you have molded me to what I am today. As I set sail to a new journey, I am thrilled to know that I can always find a home in Ateneo.
