Everyone was a success story. Valedictorians, editor-in-chiefs, gold medalists and the sort. You would meet actors, writers, and thinkers on a daily basis. “The top two percent,” Ambeth Ocampo jests, “who would go on to oppress the other ninety-eight.” If there’s anything, I thank the Jesuits (Fr. Dacanay & Giordano, among many) for what was a truly human education. It was not so much the Sciences alone, but the Christian foundation of Faith and Works which still lives on in Ateneo’s curriculum!

Mary Allison S. Julian

At first glance, one would think that Allison is shy and quiet. But behind her timid and gentle disposition is a passionate and determined young dreamer. Once you get to know her, you would not expect to find how charming and interesting she could be. You would be surprised at her fearlessness behind the wheel and on the race track. Yet, she can also make letters dance as she makes wonderful art gracefully. Nevertheless, she never fails to be herself, as she always puts a smile on her face.
