

MINOR IN FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT

Kimberly Ann S. Tan

College was a bittersweet journey of happy and sad days, aced and failed exams, and beginnings and endings of friendship; it had its fair share of sleepless nights, coffee-induced palpitations, and stressful emergencies. Ateneo broke me several times, but it taught me to continuously rebuild, to strive for something better, and to believe in myself and in other people. To those who have inspired me, become dear to me, and become family, a most sincere thank you for being part of this journey.

“If you’re going through hell, keep going.” (W. Churchill)
Kimbell perseveres until the end without looking back. Although she may seem serious, she is a funny and adventurous person around her friends, which was highlighted by her JTA experience in Audencia. From saving every penny to conquering a strenuous ten-day backpacking trip over seven countries, Kimbell displayed the independence and leadership that she hopes to carry with her in the future.
