

Rian Naven R. Villanueva

It is ingrained in us to strive for excellence and arrive at a point at which greatness is no longer a stranger. While it is a great feeling to relish in that thought, the true test of one's character is how they accept their mediocrity. Look inwards and acknowledge how you falter. Fear not your weakness, for in your most fragile nature lie the extent of your prowess. Ground yourself in your austerity and no matter how high you soar above the clouds, you will know how sweet triumph is.

MINOR IN FRENCH STUDIES

Samantha Nicole M. Warren

College was a transformation from bottles of water to cups of coffee, cramming the day before to cramming hours before, tears over heartbreaks to tears over academics, and a freshman who still had 4 years in between her and her aspirations to a senior now chasing after her dreams, hoping she's going the right path. To my constants: Rizal Library, Irwin Theater, Gonzaga Studio, MVP 216 and MVP 300, thank you for always having a place for me. Ateneo, you will forever be in my heart.