“Be not afraid of life. Believe that life is worth living, and your belief will help create the fact.”
(William James)

You have to be quick and curious and playful and strong. Allow your heart to beat at the thought of new possibilities that each of your waking day can bring. Keep your curiosities unanswered. Let them hold you grounded on always thinking of your deepest “why”. Never stop your playful mind from thriving. Use it to dream wildly and relentlessly. When all of these are said and done, you have one thing left to muster: to never forget that you will always emerge stronger than your doubts and flaws.
